SELLER'S CONTINUATION — PRIOR WORK

During the first winter after purchase, wind-driven rain reached the interior sill of the rear bedroom window. A glazing contractor renewed the exterior seal in April 2021. Seller observed no recurrence during subsequent ordinary rain but did not open the wall cavity or obtain a mold assessment. In June 2023 a plumbing contractor replaced the kitchen faucet and flexible supply connectors; no relocation of a drain or supply line was included. The service invoices are identified in the repair index as R-04 and R-09. The seller does not possess drawings for the original construction and cannot identify concealed piping materials throughout the residence.

BUYER ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF SCOPE

A blank district amount is not a guarantee of a zero future tax bill. Transfer may affect assessment and supplemental billing independently of any special district. If a title exception, seller notice, or tax bill identifies a district, obtain its current parcel-specific amount, escalation provisions, and applicable term before substituting a figure in closing estimates. This worksheet makes no tax exemption election and gives no assurance that an estimate will equal the next bill.

KNOWLEDGE LIMITS AND RECORDS DELIVERED

Responses concern the seller's actual recollection during occupancy and are not a representation that an unobserved condition cannot exist. A response of 'not known' is different from a negative test result. Roof surfaces, foundation cavities, underground lines, and areas behind stored belongings have not been opened for purposes of these responses. Service papers delivered with the packet are identified by date rather than adopted as the seller's independent expert opinion. Buyer may ask follow-up questions through the representatives and may employ qualified specialists within the investigation arrangements. Later knowledge of a material change shall be conveyed in a dated supplement identifying the earlier response affected.

RECEIPT AND ATTACHMENTS

The recipient is asked to compare the subject address on the cover with the property under contract before acknowledging receipt. Receipt does not signify that every question has been answered to the recipient's satisfaction or that any investigation right has been waived. Continuations referenced by a response form part of the delivered record; an unattached reference should be requested before relying on the response. Estimates of age or cost are identified as recollections unless supported by an invoice. Neither a checked response nor the absence of a comment determines insurability, permitted use, market value, or the condition of another component not addressed in that response.
